NEW QUESTION: 2What is the correct statement about VLAN planning for WLAN?A. When deploying authentication-based user VLANs, use in conjunction with user group authorization technologyB. When using tunnel forwarding, the management VLAN and service VLAN cannot be the same VLAN.C. The management VLAN is responsible for transmitting packets forwarded through the CAPWAP tunnel, so the management VLAN must be VLAN 1.D. When tunnel forwarding is used, the management VLAN and service VLAN can be the same VLAN.Answer: A,B

NEW QUESTION: 3Your team is setting up a test lab for the test team. Hyper-V is not the company virtualization standard. You are in a planning meeting representing the development team.The information technology (IT) group indicates that they are reluctant to purchase a Hyper-V server and have limited resources available for maintaining test environments.You need to suggest a solution for managing pre-production environments.What should you do?A. Explain that Lab Management is a solution and that IT will not need to be involved since Lab Management can be used to self provision test VMs.B. Explain that TFS Lab Management is a solution, but requires Hyper-V.C. Explain that Standard Environments in Lab Management can be used, but that IT will still have to provision test VMs.D. Explain that Standard Environments in Lab Management is a solution, but requires physical machines.Answer: C*Explanation: Standard Environments: Standard environments can contain a mix of virtual and physical machines. You can also add virtual machines to a standard environment that are managed by third-party virtualization frameworks. In addition, standard environments do not require additional server resources such as an SCVMM server. SCVMM environments: SCVMM environments can only contain virtual machines that are managed by SCVMM (System Center Virtual Machine Manager), so the virtual machines in SCVMM environments can only run on the Hyper-V virtualization framework. However, SCVMM environments provide the following automation and management features that are not available in standard environments. <http://msdn.microsoft.com/en-us/library/vstudio/dd997438.aspx>
