NEW QUESTION: 3 Your network contains an Active Directory domain named contoso.com.You have an organizational unit (OU) named Sales and an OU named Engineering.Users in the Sates OU frequently log on to client computers in the Engineering OU. You need to meet the following requirements:- All of the user settings in the Group Policy objects (GPOs) linked to both the Sales OU and the Engineering OU must be applied to sales users when they log on to client computers in the Engineering OU.- Only the policy settings in the GPOs linked to the Sales OU must be applied to sales users when they log on to client computers in the Sales OU. - Policy settings in the GPOs linked to the Sales OU must not be applied to users in the Engineering OU. What should you do?A. Link the GPO to the Engineering OU.B. Modify the Group Policy permissions.C. Enable loopback processing in merge mode.D. Enable block inheritance.E. Link the GPO to the Sales OU.F. Configure Group Policy Preferences.G. Enable loopback processing in replace mode.H. Configure the link order.I. Configure WMI filtering.J. Configure Restricted Groups.Answer: CExplanation:We have to use loopback processing in merge mode if we want all User Configuration settings from the GPO's that are linked to the Sales OU and the Engineering OU to be applied. Reference 1: http://technet.microsoft.com/en-us/library/cc782810.aspxLoopback processing with merge or replace Setting loopback causes the User Configuration settings in GPOs that apply to the computer to be applied to every user logging on to that computer, instead of (in replace mode) or in addition to (in merge mode) the User Configuration settings of the user. This allows you to ensure that a consistent set of policies is applied to any user logging on to a particular computer, regardless of their location in Active Directory. Loopback can be set to Not Configured, Enabled, or Disabled. In the Enabled state, loopback can be set to Merge or Replace. In either case the user only receives user-related policy settings.Loopback with Replace-In the case of Loopback with Replace, the GPO list for the user is replaced in its entirety by the GPO list that is already obtained for the computer at computer startup (during step 2 in Group Policy processing and precedence). The User Configuration settings from this list are applied to the user. Loopback with Merge-In the case of Loopback with Merge, the Group Policy object list is a concatenation. The default list of GPOs for the user object is obtained, as normal, but then the list of GPOs for the computer (obtained during computer startup) is appended to this list. Because the computer's GPOs are processed after the user's GPOs, they have precedence if any of the settings conflict.Reference 2: http://kudratsapaev.blogspot.in/2009/07/loopback-processing-of-group-policy.htmlFor a clear and easy explanation of Loopback Processing. Recommended! Reference 3: Windows Server 2008 R2 Unleashed (SAMS, 2010) page 1028 Loopback Processing When a user is processing domain policies, the policies that apply to that user are based on the location of the user object in the Active Directory hierarchy. The same goes for domain policy application for computers. There are situations, however, when administrators or organizations want to ensure that all users get the same policy when logging on to a particular computer or server. For example, on a computer that is used for training or on a Remote Desktop Session Host, also known as a Terminal Server, when the user desktop environment must be the same for each user, this can be controlled by enabling loopback processing in Replace mode on a policy that is applied to the computer objects. To explain a bit further, if a domain policy has the loopback settings enabled and set to Replace mode, any settings defined within that policy in the User Configuration node are applied to all users who log on to the computer this particular policy is applied to. When loopback processing is enabled and configured in Merge mode on a policy applied to a computer object and a user logs on, all of the user policies are applied and then all of the user settings within the policy applied to the computer object are also applied to the user. This ensures that in either Replace or Merge mode, loopback processing applies the settings contained in the computer-linked policies last.
