Options not in brackets are mandatory.lun create -s size -t ostype [ -o noreserve ] [ -e space_alloc ] lun_pathThis usage of the lun create command should be employed to create a new LUN of given size,with initiallyzero contents. The LUN is created at the lun_path given. No file should already exist atthe given lun_path. Thedirectory specified in the lun_path must be a qtree root directory.The size is specified in bytes. Optionally, a number followed by a one-character multiplier suffixcan be used: c(1), w (2), b (512), k (1024), m (k*k), g (k*m), t (m*m).The size of the created LUN could be larger than the size specified, in order to get an integral number of cylinders while reporting the geometry using SAN protocols. The size of the LUN actually created is reported if it is different from that specified in the command. The mandatory ostype argument is one of: solaris (the LUN will be used to store a Solaris raw disk in a single slice partition), windows (the LUN will be used to store a raw disk device in a single-partition Windows disk using the MBR (Master Boot Record) partitioning style), hpux (the LUN will be used to store HP-UX data), aix (the LUN will be used to store AIX data), vld (the LUN contains a SnapManager VLD), linux (the LUN will be used to store a Linux raw disk without any partition table), netware (the LUN will be used to store NetWare data), vmware (the LUN will be used to store VMware data), windows_gpt (the LUN will be used to store Windows data using the GPT (GUID Partition Type) partitioning style), windows_2008 (the LUN will be used to store Windows data for Windows 2008 systems), openvms (the LUN will be used to store Open-VMS data), xen (the LUN will be used to store Xen data), hyper_v (the LUN will be used to store Hyper-V data), solaris_efi (the LUN will be used to store Solaris_EFI data). By default, the LUN is space-reserved. To manage space usage manually, -o noreserve can be specified. Using this option will create a LUN without any space being reserved. Provisioning threshold events can be enabled by specifying -e space_alloc option. This option has to be used in conjunction with -o noreserve.
