NEW QUESTION: 1You have a server named Server2 that runs Windows Server 2012. You have storage provisioned on Server2 as shown in the exhibit. (Click the Exhibit button.) You need to configure the storage so that it appears in Windows Explorer as a drive letter on Server1. Which three actions should you perform in sequence? To answer, move the three appropriate actions from the list of actions to the answer area and arrange them in the correct order. In real test question status of Server1 iSCSI initiator is "Not connected" (Thanks to Odissey for this information) Select and Place: Answer: Explanation: Explanation/Reference: NO EXHIBIT => BIG DOUBT we really miss the exhibit here (and it's the first time I could not find a VCE question from all over the internet (it only exists on this VCE, so I couldn't find the exhibit...)) difficult to answer a question if half is missing, but anyway I'll try to help about So let's try to think... Odissey told us that Server1 iSCSI initiator's status is "Not connected". But my problem is I can't succeed to reproduce a "not connected" status on my iSCSI initiator (I only get "connected" or "inactive") To me, not connected can be seen in the iSCSI target management, not in iSCSI initiator configuration. Anyway... Here we have three steps to reorder Create a new volume from Server Manager Configure the iSCSI initiator to connect to target1 (the iSCSI initiator configuration is client-side, in this case, on Server1 : we simply add the IP address of the target) Add an iSCSI initiator ID to target1. (and this is done from the iSCSI target computer, so on Server2 : we add the Server1's IQN to Server2 to enable Server1 to connect to the target) For sure, to configure the initiator to connect to target1, target1 should be available to Server1. And to make it available, its initiator ID (IQN) must have been added to target1 so we're sure of this order: Add an iSCSI initiator ID to target1. Configure the iSCSI initiator to connect to Then what about the creation of the volume. To me it depends of the missing exhibit... The disk can be managed (in this case create a volume) on the server it's connected/mounted to... Doing it locally on server2 could be done before the 2 other steps and then those 2 steps would automatically connect the volume to Server1 (I tested it) But it can be done automatically too, right after the 2 steps... it depends of the current state of the configuration, which we don't know nothing about... NB : in 2012 when we create a vhd, during the installation, we assign it to a target, then designate the IQN of the initiator that is allowed to connect to this target, then we go to the initiator computer to create the volume (as the vhd was automatically connected to the initiator computer) but here, we don't know nothing about what is created or not, what was deleted or not, configured or not... so the only thing I'm 100% sure is that we add the initiator's IQN to the target computer before we can configure the iSCSI initiator.
