Identify two accurate descriptions about managing multiple instances of each adapter in the runtime.A. JCA tiles for each adapter instanceB. One entry per adapter instance in the adapters_config.xml fileC. Adapter connection factories specified in the WLS ConsoleD. Instance configuration in the SOA Suite deployment planAnswer: B,D*Explanation:The Oracle Database Adapter is a JCA 1.5 connector, which is deployed to the application server during installation.The Oracle Database Adapter consists of multiple instances; each instance represents a connection to a database end point. Different SOA processes may point to the same adapter instance (database), while different service endpoints in a SOA process may point to different adapter instances (databases). Because each adapter instance points to a single database, there is a one-to-one correspondence from adapter instances to application server data sources. Out of the box there is a single Oracle Database Adapter instance named eis/DB/SOADemo, which points to the data source jdbc/SOADDataSource. The list of adapter instances is stored in a deployment descriptor file, weblogic-ra.xml on Oracle WebLogic Server. (It is inside of DbAdapter.rar, which contains also the Java class files in DBAdapter.jar). Configuring an Oracle Database Adapter instance is more about creating the underlying data source: getting the correct JDBC driver and connection URL.
