NEW QUESTION: 1When you post an amount to an asset in the LVA class that is above the threshold for the maximumvalue, how does the system respond?A. The system produces an error message; for you to post, you must split the asset or post to anotherasset class.B. You receive a warning message; the asset is posted, but the depreciation key is adjusted to normal depreciation.C. The system posts the value up to the LVA threshold and posts the rest to the generated assetsubnumber.D. The system adjusts the asset quantity to the value that keeps the asset below the maximumthreshold.Answer: A*Explanation:When you try to post above the maximum value for an asset created in the LVA class, the systemproduces an error. You can only post up to the maximum amount for assets in this class. In this case, youwould check if you can split the posting or more likely create the asset in a "normal" asset class. Theother options have one thing in common: the system is making a lot of decisions and automations. As arule, the default system keeps things simple. Too much automation runs into problems when dealingwith processes and transactions that might be done very differently depending on the company.
