NEW QUESTION: 1What is the difference between Advisory and Regulatory security policies?A. there is no difference between themB. Advisory policies are mandated while Regulatory policies are notC. Advisory policies are not mandated. Regulatory policies must be implemented.D. regulatory policies are high level policy, while advisory policies are very detailedAnswer: C*Explanation:Advisory policies are security polices that are not mandated to be followed but are strongly suggested, perhaps with serious consequences defined for failure to follow them (such as termination, a job action warning, and so forth). A company with such policies wants most employees to consider these policies mandatory. Most policies fall under this broad category. Advisory policies can have many exclusions or application levels. Thus, these policies can control some employees more than others, according to their roles and responsibilities within that organization. For example, a policy that requires a certain procedure for transaction processing might allow for an alternative procedure under certain, specified conditions.Regulatory Regulatory policies are security policies that an organization must implement due to compliance, regulation, or other legal requirements. These companies might be financial institutions, public utilities, or some other type of organization that operates in the public interest. These policies are usually very detailed and are specific to the industry in which the organization operates.Regulatory polices commonly have two main purposes:1.To ensure that an organization is following the standard procedures or base practices of operation in its specific industry2.To give an organization the confidence that it is following the standard and accepted industry policyInformativeInformative policies are policies that exist simply to inform the reader. There are no implied orspecified requirements, and the audience for this information could be certain internal (within theorganization) or external parties. This does not mean that the policies are authorized for publicconsumption but that they are general enough to be distributed to external parties (vendorsaccessing an extranet, for example) without a loss of confidentiality.References:KRUTZ, Ronald L. & VINES, Russel D., The CISSP Prep Guide: Mastering the Ten Domains ofComputer Security, John Wiley & Sons, 2001, Page 12, Chapter 1: Security ManagementPractices.also see:The CISSP Prep Guide:Mastering the Ten Domains of Computer Security by Ronald L. NEW QUESTION: 2Your company network includes users in multiple directories.You plan to publish a software-as-a-service application named SaaSApp1 to Azure ActiveDirectory.You need to ensure that all users can access SaaSApp1.What should you do?A. Configure the application as a multi-tenant.B. Register the application as a web application.C. Configure the Federation Metadata URLD. Register the application as a native client application.Answer: A*Explanation: *When you get deeper into using Windows Azure Active Directory, you'll run into new terminology. For instance, is called "directory" is also referred to as a Windows Azure AD Tenant or simply as "tenant." This stems from the fact that WAAD ()Windows Azure Active Directory is a shared service for many clients. In this service, every client gets its own separate space for which the client is the tenant. In the case of WAAD this space is a directory. This might be a little confusing, because you can create multiple directories, in WAAD terminology multiple tenants, even though you are a single client.*Multitenant Applications in Azure A multitenant application is a shared resource that allows separate users, or "tenants," to view the application as though it was their own. A typical scenario that lends itself to a multitenant application is one in which all users of the application may wish to customize the user experience but otherwise have the same basic business requirements. Examples of large multitenant applications are Office 365, Outlook.com, and visualstudio.com.
