NEW QUESTION: 2A. Option BB. Option DC. Option AD. Option CAnswer: BExplanation: Configuring Port Security<http://packetlife.net/blog/2010/may/3/port-security/>We can view the default port security configuration with show port-security:<http://www.ciscopress.com/articles/article.asp?p=1722561>Switchport Security Violations The second piece of switchport port-security that must be understood is a security violation including what it is what causes it and what the different violation modes that exist. A switchport violation occurs in one of two situations:When the maximum number of secure MAC addresses has been reached (by default, the maximum number of secure MAC addresses per switchport is limited to 1)An address learned or configured on one secure interface is seen on another secure interface in the same VLAN The action that the device takes when one of these violations occurs can be configured: Protect-This mode permits traffic from known MAC addresses to continue to be forwarded while dropping traffic from unknown MAC addresses when over the allowed MAC address limit. When configured with this mode, no notification action is taken when traffic is dropped. Restrict-This mode permits traffic from known MAC addresses to continue to be forwarded while dropping traffic from unknown MAC addresses when over the allowed MAC address limit. When configured with this mode, a syslog message is logged, a Simple Network Management Protocol (SNMP) trap is sent, and a violation counter is incremented when traffic is dropped. Shutdown-This mode is the default violation mode; when in this mode, the switch will automatically force the switchport into an error disabled (err-disable) state when a violation occurs. While in this state, the switchport forwards no traffic. The switchport can be brought out of this error disabled state by issuing the errdisable recovery cause CLI command or by disabling and re-enabling the switchport. Shutdown VLAN-This mode mimics the behavior of the shutdown mode but limits the error disabled state to the specific violating VLAN.

NEW QUESTION: 4 Activity levels of the green iguana vary in cycles that are repeated every 24 hours. It is logical to assume that alteration in the intensity of incident light is the stimulus that controls these daily biological rhythms. But there is much evidence to contradict this hypothesis. Which of the following, if known, is evidence that contradicts the hypothesis stated above? A. Even when exposed to constant light intensity around the clock, some iguanas display rates of activity that are much greater during daylight hours than at night. B. When animals are transported from one time zone to another, their daily biological rhythms adjust in a matter of days to the periods of sunlight and darkness in the new zone. C. While some animals, such as the rabbit, are much more active during the day, others, such as moles, show greater activity at night. D. The temperature of the green iguana varies throughout the day, with the maximum occurring in the late afternoon and the minimum in the morning. E. Other types of iguanas display similar activity cycles even though they live in very different climates.

Answer: A Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: The best answer is E. If iguanas that are exposed to light 24 hours a day display a similar pattern of activity as those exposed to natural light and dark cycles this constitutes evidence against the hypothesis that it is the alterations in light that control biological cycles.
