NEW QUESTION: 2 Which of the following answer specifies the correct sequence of levels within the Capability Maturity Model (CMM)?A. Initial, Managed, Quantitatively managed, Defined, optimizedB. Initial, Managed, Defined, Quantitatively managed, optimizedC. Initial, Managed, Defined, optimized, Quantitatively managedD. Initial, Defined, Managed, Quantitatively managed, optimizedAnswer: BExplanation:Maturity model A maturity model can be viewed as a set of structured levels that describe how well the behaviors, practices and processes of an organization can reliably and sustainable produce required outcomes.Image Source - http://www.cmmilevels.com/cmmi-levels.jpgA maturity model can be used as a benchmark for comparison and as an aid to understanding - forexample, for comparative assessment of different organizations where there is something incommon that can be used as a basis for comparison. In the case of the CMM, for example, thebasis for comparison would be the organizations' software development processes.StructureThe model involves five aspects: Maturity Levels: a 5-level process maturity continuum - where the uppermost (5th) level is a notional ideal state where processes would be systematically managed by a combination of process optimization and continuous process improvement.Key Process Areas: a Key Process Area identifies a cluster of related activities that, whenperformed together, achieve a set of goals considered important.Goals: the goals of a key process area summarize the states that must exist for that key processarea to have been implemented in an effective and lasting way. The extent to which the goalshave been accomplished is an indicator of how much capability the organization has establishedat that maturity level. The goals signify the scope, boundaries, and intent of each key processarea.Common Features: common features include practices that implement and institutionalize a keyprocess area. There are five types of common features: commitment to perform, ability to perform,activities performed, measurement and analysis, and verifying implementation.Key Practices: The key practices describe the elements of infrastructure and practice thatcontribute most effectively to the implementation and institutionalization of the area.LevelsThere are five levels defined along the continuum of the model and, according to the SEI:"Predictability, effectiveness, and control of an organization's software processes are believed toimprove as the organization moves up these five levels. While not rigorous, the empirical evidenceto date supports this belief".Initial (chaotic, ad hoc, individual heroics) - the starting point for use of a new or undocumentedrepeat process. Repeatable - the process is at least documented sufficiently such that repeating the same steps may be attempted.Defined - the process is defined/confirmed as a standard business process, and decomposed tolevels 0, 1 and 2 (the last being Work Instructions).Managed - the process is quantitatively managed in accordance with agreed-upon metrics.Optimizing - process management includes deliberate process optimization/improvement.Within each of these maturity levels are Key Process Areas which characteristic that level, and foreach such area there are five factors: goals, commitment, ability, measurement, and verification.These are not necessarily unique to CMM, representing - as they do - the stages thatorganizations must go through on the way to becoming mature.The model provides a theoretical continuum along which process maturity can be developedincrementally from one level to the next. Skipping levels is not allowed/feasible.Level 1 - Initial (Chaotic)It is characteristic of processes at this level that they are (typically) undocumented and in a state ofdynamic change, tending to be driven in an ad hoc, uncontrolled and reactive manner by users orevents. This provides a chaotic or unstable environment for the processes.Level 2 - RepeatableIt is characteristic of processes at this level that some processes are repeatable, possibly withconsistent results. Process discipline is unlikely to be rigorous, but where it exists it may help toensure that existing processes are maintained during times of stress.Level 3 - DefinedIt is characteristic of processes at this level that there are sets of defined and documentedstandard processes established and subject to some degree of improvement over time. Thesestandard processes are in place (i.e., they are the AS-IS processes) and used to establishconsistency of process performance across the organization.Level 4 - ManagedIt is characteristic of processes at this level that, using process metrics, management caneffectively control the AS-IS process (e.g., for software development). In particular, managementcan identify ways to adjust and adapt the process to particular projects without measurable lossesof quality or deviations from specifications. Process Capability is established from this level.Level 5 - OptimizingIt is a characteristic of processes at this level that the focus is on continually improving process performance through both incremental and innovative technological changes/improvements. At maturity level 5, processes are concerned with addressing statistical common causes of process variation and changing the process (for example, to shift the mean of the process performance) to improve process performance. This would be done at the same time as maintaining the likelihood of achieving the established quantitative process-improvement objectives.The following answers are incorrect:The other option specified in the option does not provide correct sequence.The following reference(s) were/was used to create this question: CISA review manual 2014 Page number 188CISSP Official study guide page number 693Topic 5, Security Operations
