NEW QUESTION: 1For each of the following statements, select Yes if the statement is true. Otherwise, select No.NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.Answer: Explanation: Explanation:In a Hybrid-IT scenario, Active Directory from on-premises can be extended to serve as the authentication mechanism through an Azure deployed domain controller (as well as potentially using the integrated DNS).It is important to distinguish between traditional Active Directory Servers and Microsoft Azure Active Directory that provides only a subset of the traditional on-premises AD offering. This subset include Identity and Access Management, but does not have the full AD schema or services that many 3rd party application take advantage of. While Azure Active Directory IS a requirement to establish authentication for the Azure virtual machines in use, and it can synchronize users with customers' on-premises AD, the two are explicitly different and customers will likely continue to require full Active Directory servers deployed in Microsoft Azure.References:

NEW QUESTION: 3On an ext2 filesystem, a running daemon has created a large logfile that is beginning to fill the disk. After deleting the file with an "rm-f" command as root, "df" shows that the space is still in use even though the file is not shown using "ls". To reclaim this space you must:A. Run fsck.B. Use sync.C. Restart the daemon.D. Unmount and remount the filesystem.E. Recreate the file.Answer: CExplanation:Explanation: If you have a daemon which writes a log file and keeps that file open for writing then removing the file will not free up the disk space. The filesystem still sees the program as having a reference to it. Therefore the filesystem will not free up that disk space. The only way to free the space is to restart the daemonReference: <http://mail.gnu.org/pipermail/bug-fileutils/2001-February/001495.html>
