NEW QUESTION: 1 A company that must comply with regulations is searching for a laptop encryption product to use for its 40,000 end points. The product must meet regulations but also be flexible enough to minimize overhead and support in regards to password resets and lockouts. Which of the following implementations would BEST meet the needs?
A. A full-disk hardware-based encryption product with a low-level boot protection and authentication
B. A file-based encryption product using profiles to target areas on the file system to encrypt
C. A container-based encryption product that allows the end users to select which files to encrypt
D. A partition-based software encryption product with a low-level boot protection and authentication
Answer: B
Explanation: The question is asking for a solution that will minimize overhead and support in regards to password resets and lockouts. File based encryption products operate under the context of the computer user's user account. This means that the user does not need to remember a separate password for the encryption software. If the user forgets his user account password or is locked out due to failed login attempts, the support department can reset his password from a central database of user accounts (such as Active Directory) without the need to visit the user's computer. Profiles can be used to determine areas on the file system to encrypt such as Document folders.
Incorrect Answers:
A: A partition-based software encryption product with a low-level boot protection and authentication would require that the user remember a separate password from his computer login password. This does not minimize overhead and support in regards to password resets and lockouts.
B: An encryption product that allows the end users to select which files to encrypt is not the best solution. A solution that automatically encrypts the necessary data is a better solution.
C: A full-disk hardware-based encryption product with a low-level boot protection and authentication would require that the user remember a separate password from his computer login password. This does not minimize overhead and support in regards to password resets and lockouts.
