NEW QUESTION: 2 General Overview You are the Senior Database Administrator (DBA) for a software development company named Leaffield Solutions. The company develops software applications custom designed to meet customer requirements. Requirements Leaffield Solutions has been asked by a customer to develop a web-based Enterprise Resource Planning and Management application. The new application will eventually replace a desktop application that the customer is currently using. The current application will remain in use while the users are trained to use the new webbased application. You need to design the SQL Server and database infrastructure for the web-based application. Databases You plan to implement databases named Customers, Sales, Products, Current_Inventory, and TempReporting. The Sales database contains a table named OrderTotals and a table named SalesInfo. A stored procedure named SPUpdateSalesInfo reads data in the OrderTotals table and modifies data in the SalesInfo table. The stored procedure then reads data in the OrderTotals table a second time and makes further changes to the information in the SalesInfo table. The Current_Inventory database contains a large table named Inv_Current. The Inv_Current table has a clustered index for the primary key and a nonclustered index. The primary key column uses the identity property. The data in the Inv_Current table is over 120GB in size. The tables in the Current_Inventory database are accessed by multiple queries in the Sales database. Another table in the Current_Inventory database contains a self-join with an unlimited number of hierarchies. This table is modified by a stored procedure named SPUpdate2. An external application named ExternalApp1 will periodically query the Current_Inventory database to generate statistical information. The TempReporting database contains a single table named GenInfo. A stored procedure named SPUpdateGenInfo combines data from multiple databases and generates millions of rows of data in the GenInfo table. The GenInfo table is used for reports. When the information in GenInfo is generated, a reporting process reads data from the Inv_Current table and queries information in the GenInfo table based on that data. The GenInfo table is deleted after the reporting process completes. The Products database contains tables named ProductNames and ProductTypes. Current System The current desktop application uses data stored in a SQL Server 2005 database named DesABCopAppDB. This database will remain online and data from the Current_Inventory database will be copied to it as soon as data is changed in the Current_Inventory database. SQL Servers A new SQL Server 2012 instance will be deployed to host the databases for the new system. The databases will be hosted on a Storage Area Network (SAN) that provides highly available storage. Design Requirements Your SQL Server infrastructure and database design must meet the following requirements: Confidential information in the Current_Inventory database that is accessed by ExternalApp1 must be securely stored. Direct access to database tables by developers or applications must be denied. The account used to generate reports must have restrictions on the hours when it is allowed to make a connection. Deadlocks must be analyzed with the use of Deadlock Graphs. In the event of a SQL Server failure, the databases must remain available. Software licensing and database storage costs must be minimized. Development effort must be minimized. The Tempdb databases must be monitored for insufficient free space. Failed authentication requests must be logged. Every time a new row is added to the ProductTypes table in the Products database, a user defined function that validates the row must be called before the row is added to the table. When SPUpdateSalesInfo queries data in the OrderTotals table the first time, the same rows must be returned along with any newly added rows when SPUpdateSalesInfo queries data in the OrderTotals table the second time. The performance of the SPUpdate2 stored procedure needs to be improved. Your solution must meet the design requirements. What should your solution include? A. A table variable. B. A common table expression. C. A Cursor. D. A derived table. Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 3 You need to recommend a solution that addresses the file storage requirements. What should you include in the recommendation? A. FileStream B. FileTable C. The varbinary data type D. The image data type Answer: B Explanation: * Scenario: File Storage Requirements The ERP database stores scanned documents that are larger than 2 MB. These files must only be accessed through the ERP application. File access must have the best possible read and write performance. * FileTables remove a significant barrier to the use of SQL Server for the storage and management of unstructured data that is currently residing as files on file servers. Enterprises can move this data from file servers into FileTables to take advantage of integrated administration and services provided by SQL Server. At the same time, they can maintain Windows application compatibility for their existing Windows applications that see this data as files in the file system. FileTables (SQL Server) You need to recommend a solution that addresses the installation issues.
