NEW QUESTION: 1 You need to re-establish subscriptions on SSRS01.What should you do?A. Manually failover the active node.B. Upgrade Node1 by using the SQL Server 2012 Upgrade Wizard.C. Install prerequisites and upgrade shared components on Node1 and Node2.D. Generate a SQL Server 2012 configuration file by running the SQL Server Setup executable.
Answer: B Explanation:Topic 5, Tailspin Toys Case CBackgroundYou are the business intelligence (BI) solutions architect for Tailspin Toys.You produce solutions by using SQL Server 2012 Business Intelligence edition and Microsoft SharePoint Server 2010 Service Pack 1 (SP1) Enterprise edition.Technical Background Data WarehouseThe data warehouse is deployed on a SQL Server 2012 relational database. A subset of the data warehouse schema is shown in the exhibit. (Click the Exhibit button.) The schema shown does not include the table design for the product dimension.The schema includes the following tables:- The FactSalesPlan table stores data at month-level granularity. There are twoscenarios: Forecast and Budget- The DimDate table stores a record for each date from the beginning of thecompany's operations through to the end of the next year.- The DimRegion table stores a record for each sales region, classified by country.Sales regions do not relocate to different countries.- The DimCustomer table stores a record for each customer.- The DimSalesperson table stores a record for each salesperson. If a salespersonrelocates to a different region a new salesperson record is created to support historically accurate reporting. A new salesperson record is not created if asalesperson's name changes.- The DimScenario table stores one record for each of the two planning scenarios.All relationships between tables are enforced by foreign keys. The schema design is as denormalized as possible for simplicity and accessibility. One exception to this is the DimRegion table, which is referenced by two dimension tables.Each product is classified by a category and subcategory and is uniquely identified in the source database by using its stock-keeping unit (SKU). A new SKU is assigned to a product if its size changes. Products are never assigned to a different subcategory, and subcategories are never assigned to a different category.Extract, transform, load (ETL) Drocessesoooulate the data warehouse every 24 hours. ETL ProcessesOne SQL Server Integration Services (SSIS) package is designed and developed to populate each data warehouse table. The primary source of data is extracted from a Microsoft Azure SQL Database database. Secondary data sources include a Microsoft Dynamics CRM 2011 on-premises database.ETL developers develop packages by using the SSIS project deployment model. The ETL developers are responsible for testing the packages and producing a deployment file. The deployment file is given to the ETL administrators. The ETL administrators belong to a Windows security group named SSISOwners that maps to a SQL Server login named SSISOwners.Data ModelsThe IT department has developed and manages two SQL Server Analysis Services (SSAS) BI Semantic Model (BISM) projects: Sales Reporting and Sales Analysis. The Sales Reporting database has been developed as a tabular project. The Sales Analysis database has been developed as a multidimensional project. Business analysts use PowerPivot for Microsoft Excel to produce self-managed data models based directly on the data warehouse or the corporate data models, and publish the PowerPivot workbooks to a SharePoint site.The sole purpose of the Sales Reporting database is to support business user reporting and ad-hoc analysis by using Power View. The database is configured for DirectQuery mode and all model queries result in SSAS querying the data warehouse. The database is based on the entire data warehouse.The Sales Analysis database consists of a single SSAS cube named Sales. The Sales cube has been developed to support sales monitoring, analysis, and planning. The Sales cube metadata is shown in the following graphic.Details of specific Sales cube dimensions are described in the following table. The Sales cube dimension usage is shown in the following graphic.The Sales measure group is based on the FactSales table. The Sales Plan measure group is based on the FactSalesPlan table. The Sales Plan measure group has been configured with a multidimensional OLAP (MOLAP) writeback partition. Both measure groups use MOLAP partitions, and aggregation designs are assigned to all partitions. Because the volumes of data in the data warehouse are large, an incremental processing strategy has been implemented. The Sales Variance calculated member is computed by subtracting the Sales Plan forecast amount from Sales. The Sales Variance % calculated member is computed by dividing Sales Variance by Sales. The cube's Multidimensional Expressions (MDX) script does not set any color properties.Analysis and ReportingSQL Server Reporting Services (SSRS) has been configured in SharePoint integrated mode.A business analyst has created a PowerPivot workbook named Manufacturing Performance that integrates data from the data warehouse and manufacturing data from an operational database hosted in Microsoft Azure SQL Database. The workbook has been published in a PowerPivot Gallery library in SharePoint Server and does not contain any reports. The analyst has scheduled daily data refresh from the Microsoft Azure SQL Database database. Several SSRS reports are based on the PowerPivot workbook, and all reports are configured with a report execution mode to run on demand.Recently users have noticed that data in the PowerPivot workbooks published to SharePoint Server is not being refreshed. The SharePoint administrator has identified that the Secure Store Service target application used by the PowerPivot unattended data refresh account has been deleted.Business Requirements ETL ProcessesAll ETL administrators must have full privileges to administer and monitor the SSIS catalog, and to import and manage projects.Data ModelsThe budget and forecast values must never be accumulated when querying the Sales cube. Queries should return the forecast sales values by default.Business users have requested that a single field named SalespersonName be made available to report the full name of the salesperson in the Sales Reporting data model.Writeback is used to initialize the budget sales values for a future year and is based on a weighted allocation of the sales achieved in the previous year.Analysis and ReportingReports based on the Manufacturing Performance PowerPivot workbook must deliver data that is no more than one hour old.Management has requested a new report named Regional Sales. This report must be based on the Sales cube and must allow users to filter by a specific year and present a grid with every region on the columns and the Products hierarchy on the rows. The hierarchy must initially be collapsed and allow the user to drill down through the hierarchy to analyze sales. Additionally, sales values that are less than $5000 must be highlighted in red.Technical Requirements Data WarehouseBusiness logic in the form of calculations should be defined in the data warehouse to ensure consistency and availability to all data modeling experiences.The schema design should remain as denormalized as possible and should not include unnecessary columns.The schema design must be extended to include the product dimension data.ETL ProcessesPackage executions must log only data flow component phases and errors.Data ModelsProcessing time for all data models must be minimized.A key performance indicator (KPD must be added to the Sales cube to monitor sales performance. The KPI trend must use the Standard Arrow indicator to display improving, static, or deteriorating Sales Variance % values compared to the previous time period.Analysis and ReportingITdevelooers must create a librarv of SSRS reoorts based on the Sales RcDortina database. A shared SSRS data sourcenamed Sales Reporting must be created in a SharePoint data connections library.ExhibitData Warehouse Schema:
