NEW QUESTION: 1With the shift in some countries' economies toward service industries, a new form of organization has developed. This organization structure is referred to as the professional bureaucracy. While this structure resembles the machine bureaucracy which relies on standardized work processes) in several respects, it is different in one key aspect. This significant difference is that in a professional bureaucracy:A. There is strict adherence to rules. B. Senior management has had to give up a substantial amount of control.C. Tasks are accomplished with a high degree of efficiency.D. There is a tendency for subunit conflicts to develop.Answer: B*Explanation:A professional bureaucracy e.g., a university or library) is a complex and formal but decentralized organization in which highly trained specialists have great autonomy. The jobs performed by these professionals require years of education and training. By their nature, such jobs can be performed effectively only if the employees are afforded substantial autonomy.

NEW QUESTION: 2Judy Albert and Bob Tye, who recently started their own investment advisory business, have enrolled to take the Level III CFA examination next year.
