Answer: B

Explanation: You can move a compartment to a different parent compartment within the same tenancy. When you move a compartment, all its contents (subcompartments and resources) are moved with it. After you move a compartment to a new parent compartment, the access policies of the new parent take effect and the policies of the previous parent no longer apply. Before you move a compartment, ensure that:

- You are aware of the policies that govern access to the compartment in its current position.
- You are aware of the policies in the new parent compartment that will take effect when you move the compartment.

1- Policy that defined in root compartment: Allow group admins to read subnets in compartment Finance:A:X you move compartment X from Finance:A to HR:C. The policy that governs compartment X is attached to the shared parent, root compartment. When the compartment X is moved, the policy statement is automatically updated by the IAM service to specify the new compartment location. The policy Allow group admins to read subnets in compartment Finance:A:X is updated to Allow group admins to read subnets in compartment HR:C:X so the admins group will have the same access after the compartment X is moved

2- Policy that defined in compartment A: Allow group networkadmins to manage subnets in compartment X you move compartment X from Finance:A to HR:C. However, the policy that governs compartment X here is attached directly to the A compartment. When the compartment is moved, the policy is not automatically updated. The policy that specifies compartment X is no longer valid and must be manually removed. Group networkadmins no longer has access to compartment X in its new location under HR:C. Unless another existing policy grants access to group networkadmins, you must create a new policy to allow networkadmins to continue to manage buckets in compartment X.
