NEW QUESTION: 2During a routine audit a web server is flagged for allowing the use of weak ciphers. Which of the followingshould be disabled to mitigate this risk? (Choose two.)A. AESB. SSL 3.0C. RC4D. TLS 1.0E. SSL 1.0F. DESAnswer: D,E*Explanation:Section: Threats and VulnerabilitiesExplanation/Reference:*Explanation:TLS 1.0 and SSL 1.0 both have known vulnerabilities and have been replaced by later versions. Anysystems running these ciphers should have them disabled.Transport Layer Security (TLS) and its predecessor, Secure Sockets Layer (SSL), are cryptographicprotocols designed to provide communications security over a computer network. They use X.509certificates and hence asymmetric cryptography to authenticate the counterparty with whom they arecommunicating, and to exchange a symmetric key. This session key is then used to encrypt data flowingbetween the parties. This allows for data/message confidentiality, and message authentication codes formessage integrity and as a by-product, message authenticationNetscape developed the original SSL protocol. Version 1.0 was never publicly released because of serioussecurity flaws in the protocol; version 2.0, released in February 1995, "contained a number of securityflaws which ultimately led to the design of SSL version 3.0".TLS 1.0 was first defined in RFC 2246 in January 1999 as an upgrade of SSL Version 3.0. As stated in theRFC, "the differences between this protocol and SSL 3.0 are not dramatic, but they are significant enough to preclude interoperability between TLS 1.0 and SSL 3.0". TLS 1.0 does include a means by which a TLS implementation can downgrade the connection to SSL 3.0, thus weakening security.TLS 1.1 and then TLS 1.2 were created to replace TLS 1.0.
