This is highly reliable and has the lowest false-acceptance rate (FAR) among the current biometric methods. Use of palm scanning entails placing a hand on a scanner where a palm's physical characteristics are captured. Hand geometry, one of the oldest techniques, measures the physical characteristics of the user's hands and fingers from a three dimensional perspective. The palm and hand biometric techniques lack uniqueness in the geometry data. In face biometrics, a reader analyzes the images captured for general facial characteristics.
