NEW QUESTION: 1 You are designing a SQL Server Integration Services (SSIS) data flow to load sales transactions from a source system into a data warehouse hosted on Windows Azure SQL Database. One of the columns in the data source is named ProductCode. Some of the data to be loaded will reference products that need special processing logic in the data flow. You need to enable separate processing streams for a subset of rows based on the source product code. Which Data Flow transformation should you use? A. Script Component B. Audit C. Destination Assistant D. Data Conversion Answer: A Explanation: The Script component can be used as a source, a transformation, or a destination. This component supports one input and multiple outputs. Depending on how the component is used, it supports either an input or outputs or both. The script is invoked by every row in the input or output. - If used as a source, the Script component supports multiple outputs. - If used as a transformation, the Script component supports one input and multiple outputs. - If used as a destination, the Script component supports one input.

(Choose three.) A. in the ingress direction only on the M2 module B. in the ingress direction only on M1 module C. in the ingress direction on all interfaces D. in the egress direction on all Layer 3 interfaces E. on a VLAN interface F. in the egress direction on all interfaces Answer: C,D,E

NEW QUESTION: 3 Which three statements are true about standby redo logs in a Data Guard configuration with no Oracle Streams or Goldengate configured? (Choose three.) A. They are required only for synchronous redo transport. B. It is recommended to have them on the primary database. C. Only standby databases can write redo to them. D. They are required on a physical standby for real-time apply. E. The LGWR process writes to them on a standby database. F. They are required on a logical standby for real-time apply. Answer: C,D,F Explanation: Explanation A: SQL Apply converts the data from the archived redo log or standby redo log in to SQL statements and then executes these SQL statements on the logical standby database. Note: Log apply services use the following methods to maintain physical and logical standby databases: * Redo apply (physical standby databases only) * SQL Apply (logical standby databases only) E: Standby redo log files are required to use real-time apply. By default, the redo data is applied from archived redo log files. When performing Redo Apply, a physical standby database can use the real-time apply feature to apply redo directly from the standby redo log files as they are being written by the RFS process. Applying Redo Data to Physical Standby Databases C: The archiver (ARCn) process or the log writer (LGWR) process on the primary database can transmit redo data directly to remote standby redo log files, potentially eliminating the need to register a partial archived log file (for example, to recover after a standby database crashes).
