NEW QUESTION: 2A user should always verify the quality and validity of information on the Web. What are the considerations to verify the quality and validity of information found on the Web? Each correct answer represents a part of the solution. Choose all that apply.A. VeracityB. ObjectivityC. Identify the sourceD. AvailabilityE. TimelinessAnswer: A,B,C,EExplanation:A user should use following four considerations to verify the quality and validity of information on the Web:Identify the source: A user should always identify the original source of information. If he is unable to identify the source then he should not use the information, no matter how helpful the information is.Objectivity: A user should always check whether the objective of the information is related to the source of the information. For example, a user looking for information on the benefits of pistol control will probably not find it on the National Rifle Association Web site. Timeliness: A user should check the timeliness of the information. For example, the new developments that have been made in any information since its publication. Veracity: A user should always verify the claims or discussion points made in the information. If a user needs accurate information, he should be able to verify the claims of the information.
