NEW QUESTION: 3Which statement below is accurate about Evaluation Assurance Levels (EALs) in the Common Criteria (CC)?
A. Predefined packages of assurance components that make up security confidence rating scale
B. A statement of intent to counter specified threats
C. A security level equal to the security level of the objects to which the subject has both read and write access
D. Requirements that specify the security behavior of an IT product or system
Answer: A
Explanation: An Evaluation Assurance Level (EAL) is one of seven increasingly rigorous packages of assurance requirements from CC Part 3. Each numbered package represents a point on the CCs predefined assurance scale. An EAL can be considered a level of confidence in the security functions of an IT product or system. The EALs have been developed with the goal of preserving the concepts of assurance drawn from the source criteria, such as the Trusted Computer System Evaluation Criteria (TCSEC), Information Technology Security Evaluation Criteria (ITSEC), or Canadian Trusted Computer Evaluation Criteria (CTCPEC), so that results of previous evaluations remain relevant. EAL levels 207 are generally equivalent to the assurance portions of the TCSEC C2-A1 scale, although exact TCSEC mappings do not exist. *Answer "A security level equal to the security level of the objects to which the subject has both read and write access" is the definition of Subject Security Level. A subject's security level is equal to the security level of the objects to which it has both read and write access. A subject's security level must always be dominated by the clearance of the user with which the subject is associated. * Answer "A statement of intent to counter specified threats" describes a Security Objective, which is a statement of intent to counter specified threats and/or satisfy specified organizational security policies and assumptions. *Answer "Requirements that specify the security behavior of an IT product or system" describes Security Functional Requirements. These are requirements, preferably from CC Part 2, that when taken together specify the security behavior of an IT product or system. Source: CC Project and DoD 5200.28-STD.
