NEW QUESTION: 1 Refer to the exhibit. A network administrator is trying to install a new internal application on the HP VAN SDN Controller and receives the error shown in the exhibit. Which valid options are available to ensure that the application is installed successfully? (Select two.)
A. Use the HP VAN SDN Controller software to digitally sign the application
B. Modify the `/opt/sdn/virgo/configuration/serviceability.xml` configuration file and include this line: `Dsdn signedJar=none`
C. Ensure the application is signed by a CA recognized by the HP VAN SDN Controller.
D. Set up an internal CA server and digitally sign the application. This will be accepted by the HP VAN SDN Controller without further configuration.
E. Modify the `/opt/sdn/virgo/bin/dmk.sh` script and include this line: `Dsdn.signedJar=none`
Answer: A,E
Explanation:
D_ The SDN controller enforces jar-signing validation by default. For an experimental/development environment where unsigned applications need to be deployed, jar-signing validation can be turned off altogether:
Stop the SDN controller: `sudo service sdnc stop`
2. Modify the `/opt/sdn/virgo/bin/dmk.sh` script to include the line `"-Dsdn.signedJar=none"`
3. Start the SDN controller: `sudo service sdnc start`
B: Adding Certificates to Jar-Signing Truststore
To deploy other signed applications onto the controller, use the Java keytool to import the public certificate that was used to sign the application jars into the controller jar-signing truststore (`/opt/sdn/admin/sdnjar_trust.jks`): `keytool -importcert -keystore /opt/sdn/admin/sdnjar_trust.jks -file signed_app.cer -alias mysignedcert`
The controller needs to be restarted for the new truststore to take effect.
