NEW QUESTION: 1 During a deployment, a customer has identified location data that they would like added to both chassis and interface events from active (IBM Tivoli Network Manager IP Edition V3.9 (ITNM)) and passive (traps, syslog etc.) event sources. This data has been successfully imported into the Discovery process using supported stitching techniques and appears in the topology as three custom ExtraInfo fields (see below). ncpjnode1 has been configured to transfer this location data to a custom extended NCIM database table named locations (see exhibit below). This data is only held on EntityType 1 (chassis entities) to reduce the NCIM load. The customer has identified three ObjectServer fields that they would like this data to be added to for all suitable events - NmosGeography, NmosCountry, and NmosSite. Example record in Model Description of the ncm.locations table: The ModelNcimDb configuration has been modified to map: Based on the scenario, the location data is held in NCIM at the chassis (EntityType 1) but not against each interface entity. If an SNMP linkDown trap was received by the ObjectServer, could it be enriched with the location data held on the chassis? A. No. An interface event cannot be related to the parent chassis by the gateway B. No. The data would need to be held at both the interface and chassis level to allow this enrichment C. Yes. But only if the event is sent across the gateway for further root cause analysis and entity identification D. Yes.
