NEW QUESTION: 1 A company has developed a Ruby on Rails content management platform. Currently, OpsWorks with several stacks for dev, staging, and production is being used to deploy and manage the application. Now the company wants to start using Python instead of Ruby. How should the company manage the new deployment? Choose the correct answer from the options below.
A. Update the existing stack with Python application code and deploy the application using the deploy:life-cycle action to implement the application code.
B. Create a new stack that contains the Python application code and manages separate deployments of the application via the secondary stack.
C. Create a new stack that contains the Python application code and manage separate deployments of the application via the secondary stack using the deploy lifecycle action to implement the application code.
D. Create a new stack that contains a new layer with the Python code. To cut over to the new stack the company should consider using Blue/Green deployment.
Answer: D
Explanation: Explanation Blue/green deployment is a technique for releasing applications by shifting traffic between two identical environments running different versions of the application. Blue/green deployments can mitigate common risks associated with deploying software, such as downtime and rollback capability. Please find the below link on a white paper for blue green deployments*
