NEW QUESTION: 1You are designing a subscription strategy for a SQL Server Reporting Services (SSRS) report. You have an application that populates a table with user-specific subscription schedules and report formats. You need to ensure that users can receive reports by email according to their preferences. Email messages will be sent via an internal mail server. What should you do? (More than one answer choice may achieve the goal. Select the BEST answer.)A. Create a standard SSRS subscription for each subscription schedule.B. Create a data-driven SSRS subscription for each record in the schedule table.C. Create a standard SSRS subscription for each record in the table.D. Create one data-driven SSRS subscription. Schedule the subscription to frequently retrieve user preferences.Answer: D*Explanation: Pretty sure it has to be a data driven subscription. C seems unlikely because you would have to create a new subscription each time a row is added to the table.MSDN:Data-driven reports Use data-driven subscriptions to customize report output, delivery options, and report parameter settings at run time. The subscription uses a query to get input values from a data source at run time. You can use data-driven subscriptions to perform a mail-merge operation that sends a report to a list of subscribers that is determined at the time the subscription is processed.
