NEW QUESTION: 1What is Cisco CKM (Centralized Key Management) used for?
A. to allow authenticated client devices to roam from one access point to another without any perceptible delay during re-association
B. to provide switch port security
C. to allow an access point to act as a TACACS server to authenticate the client
D. to avoid configuring PSKs (Pre-Shared Key) locally on network access devices and to configure a PSK once on a RADIUS server
Answer: A
Explanation:Using Cisco Centralized Key Management (CCKM), an access point configured to provide Wireless Domain Services (WDS) takes the place of the RADIUS server and authenticates the client so quickly that there is no perceptible delay in voice or other time-sensitive applications
