NEW QUESTION: 3 What is an advantage of reporting on storage arrays?
A. Planning for storage groups
B. Monitoring the number of disks in a RAID group
C. Planning for capacity
D. Monitoring the number of arrays
Answer: C
Explanation: Reporting on a storage infrastructure involves keeping track and gathering information from various components/processes. This information is compiled to generate reports for trend analysis, capacity planning, chargeback, and performance. Capacity planning reports contain current and historic information about the utilization of storage, file systems, database tablespace, ports, and so on. Configuration and asset management reports include details about device allocation, local or remote replicas, and fabric configuration. This report also lists all the equipment, with details, such as their purchase date, lease status, and maintenance records. Chargeback reports contain information about the allocation or utilization of storage infrastructure components by various departments or user groups. Performance reports provide details about the performance of various storage infrastructure components. EMC E10-001 Student Resource Guide. Module 15: Managing the Storage Infrastructure

NEW QUESTION: 4 Five brand managers in a consumer products company met to determine how well certain promotions had performed. The data that they needed to analyze consisted of approximately 50 gigabytes of daily point-of-sale (POS) data for each month. The brand managers tried to download the POS data from the mainframe and import it into microcomputer spreadsheets for analysis. Their efforts were unsuccessful, most likely because of:
A. The difficulty of establishing access privileges for each subset of the mainframe data.
B. The complexity of the mainframe data structure and the large volume of data.
C. Inconsistencies in the mainframe data due to lack of integrity constraints on the data files.
D. Error-prone transmission links for downloading the data from the mainframe data files.

Answer: B
