NEW QUESTION: 1 Which of the following protocols would BEST mitigate threats of sniffing attacks on web application traffic?
A. SSL or TLS B. 802.1X C. ARP Cache Security D. SSH - Secure Shell
Answer: A
Explanation: While it traverses the network, without some sort of encryption of web application data is vulnerable to sniffing and interception by attackers on the network. If we observe sniffer traffic on an unencrypted network we can clearly see the contents of user interaction with the web server and its applications. SSL - Secure Sockets Layer or TLS - Transport Layer Security There are similarities between these two protocols but TLS 3.1 supersedes SSL 2.0 but they are not interoperable. Today both protocols are commonly used on many web server. In either case SSL/TLS encrypts network traffic as it traverses the wire and protects it from sniffing attacks. The following answers are incorrect: 802.1X: This wouldn't secure data in transit but it would help prevent unauthorized devices from connecting to your network and sniffing data. Also Known As "Dot 1 X" or "The Extensible Authentication Protocol (EAP)" it provides infrastructure protection by requiring certificates to connect. ARP Cache Security: This wouldn't mitigate the threat of network sniffing of web app data. SSH - Secure Shell: Incorrect. SSH is a TELNET replacement for that encrypts traffic to mitigate the threat of network sniffers on SSH connections. The following reference(s) were/was used to create this question: 2011.
