NEW QUESTION: 2Where are high-frequency processors critical to achieve faster command processing? (Select two.)A. insecurityB. in renderingC. in video editingD. in financial tradingE. in AutoCAD'Answer: B,D

NEW QUESTION: 3What is a LAN?A. A computer network that covers a small geographic area such as office building, school, or home.B. A geographically-dispersed computer network that uses network devices such as routers.C. A computer network not owned by any one organization but that exists under collective or distributed ownership and management.D. A computer network that covers a broad area.Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 4Which of the following is TRUE about link encryption?A. Only secure nodes are used in this type of transmission.B. Encrypted messages are only decrypted by the final node.C. Each entity has a common key with the destination node.D. This mode does not provide protection if anyone of the nodes along the transmission path is compromised.

Answer: D Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: With Link Encryption each entity has keys in common with its two neighboring nodes in the transmission chain. Thus, a node receives the encrypted message from its predecessor (the neighboring node), decrypts it, and then re-encrypts it with another key that is common to the successor node. Then, the encrypted message is sent on to the successor node where the process is repeated until the final destination is reached. Obviously, this mode does not provide protection if the nodes along the transmission path can be compromised. Incorrect Answers: A: It is not true that each entity has a common key with the destination node. Each entity has keys in common with only its two neighboring nodes. B: It is not true that encrypted messages are only decrypted by the final node. Every node in the chain (except the original sending node) decrypts the message. D: It is not true that only secure nodes are used in this type of transmission. The data is encrypted for security; the nodes themselves can be insecure.
