NEW QUESTION: 1An administrator has purchased a new 10GB Converged Network Adapter (CNA) for installation in a system that is running ESXi 6.x. The administrator has downloaded the latest driver from the hardware vendor and wants to include the driver in an image. The image profile acceptance level is set to VMwareSupported. The acceptance level of the driver is VMwareSupported. Which two statements are true about the inclusion of this driver in the image? (Choose two.)A. Support calls for the driver will be directed to the partner.B. The image can be built and the driver will be included.C. Support calls for the driver will be handled by VMware.D. The image can be built, but the driver will not be included in the image.Answer: A,B
Explanation: The acceptance level of all VIBs on a host must be at least as high as the host acceptance level. For example, if the host acceptance level is VMware Accepted, you can install VIBs with acceptance levels of VMware Certified and VMware Accepted, but you cannot install VIBs with acceptance levels of Partner Supported or Community Supported. To install a VIB with a less restrictive acceptance level than that of the host, you can change the acceptance level of the host by using the vSphere Client or by running esxcli software acceptance commands. Setting host acceptance levels is a best practice that allows you to specify which VIBs can be installed on a host and used with an image profile, and the level of support you can expect for a VIB. For example, a Community Supported VIB might not be recommended for an ESXi server in a production environment.http://pubs.vmware.com/vsphere-50/index.jsp?topic=%2Fcom.vmware.vsphere.upgrade.doc_50%2FGUID-27BBB8-0
