NEW QUESTION: 2The Security team needs to provide a team of interns with an AWS environment so they can build the serverless video transcoding application. The project will use Amazon S3, AWS Lambda, Amazon API Gateway, Amazon Cognito, Amazon DynamoDB, and Amazon Elastic Transcoder. The interns should be able to create and configure the necessary resources, but they may not have access to create or modify AWS IAM roles. The Solutions Architect creates a policy and attaches it to the interns' group. How should the Security team configure the environment to ensure that the interns are self-sufficient? A. Create a policy that allows creation of project-related resources only. Require the interns to raise a request for roles to be created with the Security team. The interns will provide the requirements for the permissions to be set in the role. B. Create roles with the required service permissions, which are assumable by the services. Have the interns create and use a bastion host to create the project resources in the project subnet only. C. Create a policy that allows creation of all project-related resources, including roles that allow access only to specified resources. D. Create a policy that allows creation of project-related resources only. Create roles with required service permissions, which are assumable by the services. Answer: C Explanation: A: This will allow the interns to create and modify other S3 or Lambda resources etc that does not belong to the project. B: The most restrictive policy is enforced. Assuming Permission boundary is used to restrict access to those specific project related resources. When AWS evaluates the identity-based policies and permissions boundary for a user, the resulting permissions are the intersection of the two categories. That means that when you add a permissions boundary to a user with existing identity-based policies, you might reduce the actions that the user can perform. Alternatively, when you remove a permissions boundary from a user, you might increase the actions they can perform. An explicit deny in either of these policies overrides the allow.D: Not self-sufficient.

NEW QUESTION: 3 You have a requirement from the Customer Service organization. They want to have two pick list fields on the Service Request record, one for problem area and one for problem cause. They would also like to restrict which fields are shown in the Cause drop-down list based on which value is selected for the Area field. How can you meet this requirement?A. Create a field validation rule on the Cause field to restrict the fields that can be selected.B. Set up cascading pick lists with the Area field as the parent pick list.C. Set up cascading pick lists with the Cause field as the parent pick lists.D. Create a workflow rule to restrict the values in the Cause field.Answer: B*Explanation: Cascading picklists restrict the values of one picklist, the related picklist, based on the value selected in another picklist, the parent picklist. For example, a parent picklist might present a list of service request Categories and drive the value of a related picklist called Sub-Categories. When the user selects, for example, the value Installation for Category, the Sub-Categories picklist is dynamically constrained to show only the picklist values that are associated with the Installation Category.Reference: Oracle CRM On Demand Online Help, Defining Cascading Picklists
