NEW QUESTION: 3---Your network consists of one Active Directory domain. All domain controllers run Windows Server 2008 R2.You need to deploy Certificate Services on the network to support the following requirements:Maintain availability if a single server fails.Delegate the enrollment of certificates for separate groups of users.Restrict the types of certificates that can be issued by a certificate manager.What should you do?A. Deploy two servers that run Windows Server 2008 Standard Edition. Configure a standalone root certification authority (CA) and an enterprise subordinate CA.B. Deploy two servers that run Windows Server 2008 Enterprise Edition. Configure a failover cluster. Configure a stand-alone root certification authority (CA).C. Deploy two servers that run Windows Server 2008 R2 Enterprise Edition. Configure a failover cluster. Configure an enterprise certification authority (CA).D. Deploy two servers that run Windows Server 2008 Enterprise Edition. Configure an enterprise root certification authority (CA) and a stand-alone subordinate CA.Answer: C*Explanation:Explanation/Reference: To deploy Certificate Services on the network and ensure that the server services are available if a single server fails, you need to deploy two servers that run Windows Server 2008 Enterprise Edition because Enterprise Edition of Windows Server 2008 should be used to configure failover clustering.You need to deploy two servers to configure a failover cluster. You need to then configure a failover cluster, so that the server services are available if a single server fails. Finally you need to configure an enterprise certification authority (CA). You should use Enterprise CA because you need to use certificates in the internal network and not in the external world.Reference: Certificate Server / Enterprise CA
