NEW QUESTION: 4Note: This question is part of a series of questions that use the same or similar answer choices. An answer choice may be correct for more than one question in the series. Each question is independent of the other questions in this series. Information and details provided in a question apply only to that question.Your network contains Windows and non-Windows devices.You have a DHCP server named Server1 that has an IPv4 scope named Scope1.You need to prevent a client computer that uses the same name as an existing registration from updating the registration.What should you do?A. From the properties of Scope1, modify the Conflict detection attempts setting.B. From the properties of IPv4, configure the bindings.C. From IPv4, create a new filter.D. From the properties of Scope1, configure Name Protection.E. From Control Panel, modify the properties of Ethernet.F. From Scope1, create a reservation.G. From the properties of Scope1, create an exclusion range.H. From IPv4 run the DHCP Policy Configuration Wizard.Answer: DExplanation: <https://blogs.technet.microsoft.com/teamdhcp/2009/01/29/what-is-name-protection/> Name Protection is based on the DHCID support to the DHCP server, and support for the new DHCID RR (Resource Record) to Microsoft DNS. In addition, support for DUID will be added to the IPv4 registration on the DHCP client. Therefore DHCID is a resource record stored in DNS like other RRs. This RR is intended to be used by DHCP to store an identifier for a machine, along with other information for the name such as a machine's A/AAAA records. DHCID effectively provides a mapping to determine if a name has already been assigned, and if the address of the machine assigned to the name is the same as the machine requesting registration with this name. DHCP's unique position in the name registration process allows it to request this match, and then refuse the registration of a machine with a different address attempting to register a name with an existing DHCID record. Prevents the following name squatting situations: - Server name squatting by a client - Server name squatting by another server - Client name squatting by another client - Client name squatting by a server
