NEW QUESTION: 1You are managing a tier-1 OLTP application on an Autonomous Transaction Processing (ATP) database. Your business needs to run hourly batch processes on this ATP database that may consume more CPUs than what is available on the server. How can you limit these batch processes to not interfere with the OLTP transactions?
A. Configure ATP resource management rules to manage runtime and IO consumption for the consumer group of batch processes
B. ATP is designed for OLTP workload only; you should not run batch processes on ATP
C. Disable automated backup during the batch process operations
D. Copy OLTP data into new tables in a new table space and run batch processes against these new tables
Answer: A
Explanation:Autonomous Transaction Processing comes with predefined CPU/IO shares assigned to different consumer groups. You can modify these predefined CPU/IO shares if your workload requires different CPU/IO resource allocations. By default, the CPU/IO shares assigned to the consumer groups TPURGENT, TP, HIGH, MEDIUM, and LOW are 12, 8, 4, 2, and 1, respectively. The shares determine how much CPU/IO resources a consumer group can use with respect to the other consumer groups. With the default settings the consumer group TPURGENT will be able to use 12 times more CPU/IO resources compared to LOW, when needed. The consumer group TP will be able to use 4 times more CPU/IO resources compared to MEDIUM, when needed.
