NEW QUESTION: 1In which byte of an IP packet can traffic be marked?A. the DSCP byteB. the QoS byteC. the CoS byteD. the ToS byteAnswer: D

NEW QUESTION: 2Which type of traffic does DHCP snooping drop?A. traffic from a trusted DHCP server to clientB. DHCP messages where the destination MAC and client MAC do not matchC. discover messagesD. DHCP messages where the source MAC and client MAC do not matchAnswer: D
Explanation:Explanation/Reference:Explanation:The switch validates DHCP packets received on the untrusted interfaces of VLANs with DHCP snooping enabled. The switch forwards the DHCP packet unless any of the following conditions occur (in which case the packet is dropped):The switch receives a packet (such as a DHCP OFFER, DHCP ACK, DHCP NAK, or DHCP REQUEST packet) from a DHCP server outside the network or firewall.The switch receives a packet on an untrusted interface, and the source MAC address and the DHCP client hardware address do not match. This check is performed only if the DHCP snooping MAC address verification option is turned on.The switch receives a DHCP RELEASE or DHCP DECLINE message from an untrusted host with an entry in the DHCP snooping binding table, and the interface information in the binding table does not match the interface on which the message was received.The switch receives a DHCP packet that includes a relay agent IP address that is not 0.0.0.0. To support trusted edge switches that are connected to untrusted aggregation-switch ports, you can enable the DHCP option-82 on untrusted port feature, which enables untrusted aggregation- switch ports to accept DHCP packets that include option-82 information. Configure the port on the edge switch that connects to the aggregation switch as a trusted port.
