NEW QUESTION: 4Under "groupthink,"A. The extent of groupthink is proportional to the size of the group.B. The group is not required to reach consensus.C. There are too many alternatives to facilitate decision making.D. There is a tendency to conform to the majority's will and to ignore relevant individual input that is at variance with group opinion.*Answer: D

Explanation: Groupthink is the tendency to conform to the majority's will when individual input is at variance with the group opinion. Groupthink is a cause of faulty decision making in a group. Groups may not consider all alternatives because they desire unanimity at the expense of quality decisions. Groupthink occurs when groups are highly cohesive and under considerable pressure to make a decision.
