NEW QUESTION: 1Your network contains Exchange Server 2010 servers. All users access their mailboxes by using Outlook Web App (OWA).Your company's compliance policy states the following:-All e-mail messages that contains customer contracts must be stored for three years -Users must be able to classify e-mail messages that relate to customer contracts-Users must be able to move e-mail messages to any folderYou need to recommend a solution that supports the requirements of the compliance policy.What should you recommend?A. Retention Policy Tags and a Retention PolicyB. Managed Folder mailbox policiesC. an OWA mailbox policyD. Personal Archives and an Archive policyAnswer: A*Explanation:The Exchange admins have three types of Retention Tags they can implement with :Retention Policy Tag (or RPT) - for setting retention policies on default folders (e.g., Inbox, Junk Mail, Sent Items, etc.).All messages and items in this default folders will inherit the folder's RPT. Users cannot change the RPT, but instead can apply a different "Personal Tag" (see below) to items that live inside the default folder. So, if you have a RPT set on the Inbox folder of "Delete in 60 days", any message in the user's Inbox will automatically be tagged with this policy (i.e., "Delete in 60 days").Each supported default folder can have up to one RPT linked to it in a single Retention Policy.Default Policy Tag (or DPT) - for applying retention settings to "untagged items".Basically, if there are messages that have not already inherited a Retention Tag from the folder it's located in or the user hasn't explicitly tagged it with a "Personal Tag" (see below), this is your policy.It's hugely recommended you only have one of these in a Retention Policy.Personal Tags (or Personal Tags) - here's where you can created additional tags that your users can apply to their own customer folders (as well as individual items).They can do this in either Outlook 2010 or Outlook Web App. In our demo environment, we have created such tags, like "Acquisitions, keep for 5 years"===== In Microsoft Exchange Server 2010, messaging records management (MRM) is performed by using retention tags and retention policies. A retention policy is a group of retention tags that can be applied to a mailbox. Managed folders, the MRM technology introduced in Exchange Server 2007, are supported for interoperability.A mailbox that has a managed folder mailbox policy applied can be migrated to use a retention policy. To do so, you must create retention tags that are equivalent to the managed folders linked to the user's managed folder mailbox policy. Unlike managed folders, which require users to move items to a managed folder based on retention settings, retention tags can be applied to a folder or an individual item in the mailbox. This process has minimal impact on the user's workflow and e-mail organization methods. When a folder has retention tags applied, all items in that folder inherit the retention settings. Users can further specify retention settings by applying different retention tags to individual items in that folder.Managed folders support different managed content settings for a folder, each with a different message class (such as e-mail items or calendar items). Retention tags don't require a separate managed content settings object because the retention settings are specified in the tag's properties. It isn't supported to create retention tags for particular message classes. Retention tags also don't allow you to use journaling (which is performed by the Managed Folder Assistant). The following table compares the MRM functionality available when using retention tags or managed folders.

Retention tags vs. managed folders
Use the Shell to migrate mailbox users from managed folders
Note: You can't use the EMC to migrate mailbox users from managed folders.
For the following procedures, Contoso mailboxes have a managed folder mailbox policy applied containing the following managed folders.
Managed folders for Contoso
The following are general steps for migrating users from this managed folder mailbox policy to a retention policy. Each step is detailed later in this topic:
Create retention tags for the migration.
Create a retention policy and link the newly created retention tags to the policy.
Apply the retention policy to user mailboxes.
Important: After you apply the retention policy to a user and the Managed Folder Assistant runs, the managed folders in the user's mailbox become unmanaged.
