NEW QUESTION: 3 Which action must occur before an N Port can exchange data with other N Ports?
A. The F Port must log in to its attached F Port.
B. The N Port must log in to its target F Port.
C. The F Port must log in to its target N Port.
D. The N Port must log in to its attached F Port.
Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 4 Which four actions are possible during an Online Data file Move operation?
A. Querying tables in the data file being moved
B. Executing DML statements on objects stored in the data file being moved
C. Flashing back the database
D. Creating and dropping tables in the data file being moved
E. Performing file shrink of the data file being moved
F. Performing Block Media Recovery for a data block in the data file being moved
Answer: A,B,C,D
Explanation: Incorrect: Not B: The online move data file operation may get aborted if the standby recovery process takes the data file offline, shrinks the file (not B), or drops the tablespace. Not D: The online move data file operation cannot be executed on physical standby while standby recovery is running in a mounted but not open instance. Note: You can move the location of an online data file from one physical file to another physical file while the database is actively accessing the file. To do so, you use the SQL statement ALTER DATABASE MOVE DATAFILE. An operation performed with the ALTER DATABASE MOVE DATAFILE statement increases the availability of the database because it does not require that the database be shut down to move the location of an online data file. In releases prior to Oracle Database 12c Release 1 (12.1), you could only move the location of an online data file if the database was down or not open, or by first taking the file offline. You can perform an online move data file operation independently on the primary and on the standby (either physical or logical). The standby is not affected when a data file is moved on the primary, and vice versa. Reference: Oracle Data Guard Concepts and Administration 12c, Moving the Location of Online Data Files
