NEW QUESTION: 1 You execute the following FLASHBACK TABLE command: `SQL> FLASHBACK TABLE emp TO TIMESTAMP TO_TIMESTAMP('2008-01-04 11:00:00','YYYY-MMDD HH24:MI:SS');` Which two statements are correct? (Choose two.)
A. The FLASHBACK TABLE statement does not maintain existing indexes on the emp table.
B. The changes made to the emp table since the specified time are undone if no constraint is violated during flashback.
C. The emp table that was dropped by mistake earlier is restored.
D. The FLASHBACK TABLE statement is executed as a single transaction.
Answer: B, D
Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: FLASHBACK TABLE (Link) Purpose Use the FLASHBACK TABLE statement to restore an earlier state of a table in the event of human or application error. The time in the past to which the table can be flashed back is dependent on the amount of undo data in the system. Also, Oracle Database cannot restore a table to an earlier state across any DDL operations that change the structure of the table. Semantics During an Oracle Flashback Table operation, Oracle Database acquires exclusive DML locks on all the tables specified in the Flashback list. These locks prevent any operations on the tables while they are reverting to their earlier state. The Flashback Table operation is executed in a single transaction, regardless of the number of tables specified in the Flashback list. Either all of the tables revert to the earlier state or none of them do. If the Flashback Table operation fails on any table, then the entire statement fails. At the completion of the Flashback Table operation, the data in table is consistent with table at the earlier time. However, FLASHBACK TABLE TO SCN or TIMESTAMP does not preserve rowids, and FLASHBACK TABLE TO BEFORE DROP does not recover referential constraints. Oracle Database does not revert statistics associated with table to their earlier form. Indexes on table that exist currently are reverted and reflect the state of the table at the Flashback point. If the index exists now but did not yet exist at the Flashback point, then the database updates the index to reflect the state of the table at the Flashback point. However, indexes that were dropped during the interval between the Flashback point and the current time are not restored. Logical Flashback Features Useful in Backup and Recovery (Link) The remaining flashback features operate at the logical level. The logical features documented in this chapter are as follows: Flashback Table You can recover a table or set of tables to a specified point in time in the past without taking any part of the database offline. In many cases, Flashback Table eliminates the need to perform more complicated point-in-time recovery operations. Flashback Table restores tables while automatically maintaining associated attributes such as current indexes, triggers and constraints, and not requiring you to find and restore application-specific properties. "Rewinding a Table with Flashback Table" explains how to use this feature. Flashback Drop You can reverse the effects of a DROP TABLE statement. "Rewinding a DROP TABLE Operation with Flashback Drop" explains how to use this feature. Note: Because the logical flashback features have uses not specific to backup and recovery, some documentation for them is located elsewhere in the documentation set. All logical flashback features except Flashback Drop rely on undo data. Used primarily for providing read consistency for SQL queries and rolling back transactions, undo records contain the information required to reconstruct data as it existed at a past time and examine the record of changes since that past time.

120 コマンドを使用してルータに静的デフォルトルートを設定する場合、ルータはどのように応答しますか。A.

既存のOSPFデフォルトルートが削除されるまで、新しい静的ルートを無視しますD.

ルーティングテーブルに特定の一一致するエントリがないトラフィックをGigabitEthernet0 / 1に送信し始めますAnswer: C Explanation:Explanation Our new static default route has the Administrative Distance (AD) of 120, which is bigger than the AD of OSPF External route (O*E2) so it will not be pushed into the routing table until the current OSPF External route is removed. For your information, if you don't type the AD of 120 (using the command "ip route 0.0.0.0 0.0.0.0 10.13.0.1") then the new static default route would replace the OSPF default route as the default AD of static route is 1. You will see such line in the routing table: S* 0.0.0.0/0 [1/0] via 10.13.0.1
