the LA-bit not set can be used as a virtual neighbor address. E. It is the global scope address, and it is discovered by examining the intra-area-prefix-LSAs received by the virtual neighbor. F. It is the link-local address, and it is discovered by examining the hello packets received from the virtual neighbor. Answer: C, E Explanation: OSPF for IPv6 assumes that each router has been assigned link-local unicast addresses on each of the router's attached physical links. On all OSPF interfaces except virtual links, OSPF packets are sent using the interface's associated link-local unicast address as the source address. A router learns the link-local addresses of all other routers attached to its links and uses these addresses as next-hop information during packet forwarding. On virtual links, a global scope IPv6 address MUST be used as the source address for OSPF protocol packets. The collection of intra-area-prefix-LSAs originated by the virtual neighbor is examined, with the virtual neighbor's IP address being set to the first prefix encountered with the LA-bit set.
