NEW QUESTION: 3Which of the following mechanisms is the MOST secure way to implement a secure wireless network?A. Use a Wired Equivalent Privacy (WEP) keyB. Use a Wi-Fi Protected Access (WPA2) protocolC. Filter media access control (MAC) addressesD. Web-based authenticationAnswer: BExplanation:Explanation/Reference:Explanation:WPA2 is currently one of the most secure authentication and encryption protocols for mainstream wireless products. MAC address filtering by itself is not a good security mechanism since allowed MAC addresses can be easily sniffed and then spoofed to get into the network. WEP is no longer a secure encryption mechanism for wireless communications. The WEP key can be easily broken within minutes using widely available software. And once the WEP key is obtained, all communications of every other wireless client are exposed. Finally, a web-based authentication mechanism can be used to prevent unauthorized user access to a network, but it will not solve the wireless network's main security issues, such as preventing network sniffing.
