NEW QUESTION: 2 Scenario: A Citrix Administrator has configured two sites: Site A and Site B. Each site uses the same license server named LicenseServer1. The administrator has the following additional information: The Enterprise licenses have become exhausted, and the next user from Site A attempts to launch a published desktop. What will be the outcome of this action? A. The application will launch successfully with Platinum licenses checked out. B. The application will launch successfully, and Site B will enter the Supplement Grace Period. C. The user will be unable to launch the application, and the error message "No resources available" will appear. D. The application will launch successfully, and Site A will enter the Supplement Grace Period. Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 3 Which of the following correctly describes survivorship bias? A. Survivorship bias is the positive tail risk that ensures survival over the long run B. Survivorship bias refers to prudent and conservative risk management C. Survivorship bias is the tendency for failed companies, markets or investments to be excluded from performance data. D. Survivorship bias is the negative skew in returns data resulting from credits that have survived despite a high probability of default Answer: C
Explanation: Explanation Survivorship bias is the tendency for failed companies, funds, investments and even entire markets (eg Russian stock market returns after the Communist revolution) to be excluded from performance studies because they no longer exist. Survivorship bias results in past results looking better than they actually were as data points relating to failures are not included. A risk manager needs to be aware of survivorship bias when basing risk analysis on historical data and should question if failures (eg failed funds, delisted companies etc) have been included in the data he or she is relying upon.
