NEW QUESTION: 3A security technician wishes to gather and analyze all Web traffic during a particular time period.Which of the following represents the BEST approach to gathering the required data?A. Configure a VPN concentrator to log all traffic destined for ports 80 and 443.B. Configure a switch to log all traffic destined for ports 80 and 443.C. Configure a NIDS to log all traffic destined for ports 80 and 443.D. Configure a proxy server to log all traffic destined for ports 80 and 443.Answer: DExplanation:A proxy server is in essence a device that acts on behalf of others and in security terms all internal user interaction with the Internet should be controlled through a proxy server. This makes a proxy server the best tool to gather the required data.Incorrect Answers:A. The VPN concentrator creates an encrypted tunnel session between hosts, and many use two-factor authentication for additional security. A proxy server would still be the best tool to gather the required information.C. A switch can provide a monitoring port for troubleshooting and diagnostic purposes in addition to the virtual circuit that they can create between systems in a network. This helps to reduce network traffic, but a proxy server would be a better tool to gather the required data.D. A network-based IDS (NIDS) approach to IDS attaches the system to a point in the network where it can monitor and report on all network traffic. However a proxy server would be the best tool to gather the required data.References:Dulaney, Emmett and Chuck Eastton, CompTIA Security+ Study Guide, 6th Edition, Sybex, Indianapolis, 2014, pp. 105,111
