This implies that: I. at least one of the M&M assumptions must be false. II. there must be signaling effects involved. III. investors are behaving irrationally. A. III only B. II & III C. II only D. I, II & III E. I only F. I & II Answer: E
Explanation: Explanation/Reference: Explanation: If all of the M&M assumptions held, a change in dividend policy would not cause the stock price to change; dividend policy would be irrelevant. However, one does not necessarily need signaling effects to account for market behavior.
