From Windows Media Services, publish the video as streaming content, and then burn the video to a DVD.*D. From Windows Media Services, advertise the video. Create a DVD that contains the HTML and ASPX files for the advertised video.*Answer: B*Explanation:To distribute a video file on DVD media while making sure that the video file is protected from unauthorized use and illegal distribution, you need to create a package and a license for the video file and then burn the packaged video to a DVD using Windows Media Digital Rights Manager. Windows Media Rights Manager is the technology that allows you to package Windows Media DRM files and issues licenses. You can use Windows Media Rights Manager to encrypt a given digital media file, lock it with a key, and bundle additional information from the content provider. This results in a packaged file that can only be played by the person who has obtained a license. Windows Media Rights Manager can also act as the license clearing house, authenticating the consumer's request for a license and issuing the

license to the user. Reference: Windows Media DRM FAQ
