NEW QUESTION: 4

ペンテスターは、強力で複雑なパスワードを強制するWindowsドメインでパスワードを解読しようとしなければなりません。次のうちどれが最短期間でMOSTパスワードをクラックするでしょうか?
A. 辞書攻撃
B. レインボーテーブル攻撃
C. オンラインパスワードテスト
D. 総当たり攻撃
Answer: B
Explanation:The passwords in a Windows (Active Directory) domain are encrypted. When a password is "tried" against a system it is "hashed" using encryption so that the actual password is never sent in clear text across the communications line. This prevents eavesdroppers from intercepting the password. The hash of a password usually looks like a bunch of garbage and is typically a different length than the original password. Your password might be "shitzu" but the hash of your password would look something like "7378347eedbfd761619451949225ec1". To verify a user, a system takes the hash value created by the password hashing function on the client computer and compares it to the hash value stored in a table on the server. If the hashes match, then the user is authenticated and granted access. Password cracking programs work in a similar way to the login process. The cracking program starts by taking plaintext passwords, running them through a hash algorithm, such as MD5, and then compares the hash output with the hashes in the stolen password file. If it finds a match then the program has cracked the password. Rainbow Tables are basically huge sets of precomputed tables filled with hash values that are pre-matched to possible plaintext passwords. The Rainbow Tables essentially allow hackers to reverse the hashing function to determine what the plaintext password might be. The use of Rainbow Tables allow for passwords to be cracked in a very short amount of time compared with brute-force methods, however, the trade-off is that it takes a lot of storage (sometimes Terabytes) to hold the Rainbow Tables themselves. Incorrect Answers: A: Online password testing cannot be used to crack passwords on a windows domain. C: The question states that the domain enforces strong complex passwords. Strong complex passwords must include upper and lowercase letters, numbers and punctuation marks. A word in the dictionary would not meet the strong complex passwords requirement so a dictionary attack would be ineffective at cracking the passwords in this case. D: Brute force attacks against complex passwords take much longer than a rainbow tables attack. References: <http://netsecurity.about.com/od/hackertools/a/Rainbow-Tables.htm>
