(Choose two.)A. Internet-based attacks can affect VPN customers.B. Customer performance can be affected by VPN traffic if Internet-based traffic is not prioritized on the P*C. BGP cannot simultaneously run on the PE router that runs MPLS.D. Failure on the PE router affects both VPN and Internet services.E. MP-BGP prefixes increase routers' global routing tables, which affects network convergence.Answer: A,D

NEW QUESTION: 4When using confirmations to provide evidence about the completeness assertion for accounts payable, the appropriate population most likely would be:A. Invoices filed in the entity's open invoice file.B. Payees of checks drawn in the month after the year-end.C. Amounts recorded in the accounts payable subsidiary ledger.D. Vendors with whom the entity has previously done business.Answer: D*Explanation:Explanation/Reference: Explanation:Choice "A" is correct. When testing the completeness assertion for accounts payable, the appropriate population would be a list of vendors with whom the entity has previously done business.Choice "B" is incorrect. Confirming amounts recorded would test the existence assertion, rather than completeness.Choice "C" is incorrect. Checks drawn in the subsequent period represent only a subset of the client's vendor listing. (It would not include liabilities that have not yet been paid). In obtaining information about the completeness assertion, the auditor is concerned with determining whether liabilities exist which are not reflected in the client's financial statements.Choice "D" is incorrect. The invoices filed in the entity's open invoice file would provide only a subset of the client's vendor listing. (It would not include liabilities for which the invoice had not yet been received.) In obtaining information about the completeness assertion, the auditor is concerned with determining whether liabilities exist which are not reflected in the client's financial statements.
