Answer: D

NEW QUESTION: 3You are deploying Vault in a local data center, but want to be sure you have a secondary cluster in the event the primary cluster goes offline. In the secondary data center, you have applications that are running, as they are architected to run active/active. Which type of replication would be best in this scenario?A. end-to-end replicationB. disaster recovery replicationC. performance replicationD. single-node replicationAnswer: C
Explanation:In this scenario, the key to answering is that there are applications actively running the secondary data center. Because of this, you can deploy Performance Replication and the applications can now use the Vault cluster in their respective data center. This reduces network latency for your applications and provides you with a secondary cluster for redundancy.
