NEW QUESTION: 1The release process workflow of an application requires a manual approval before the code is deployed into the production environment.What is the BEST way to achieve this using AWS CodePipeline?A. Use an approval action in a stageB. Use multiple pipelines to allow approvalC. Disable a stage just prior the deployment stageD. Disable the stage transition to allow manual approvalAnswer: A*Explanation:ExplanationRefer AWS documentation - CodePipeline ApprovalsIn AWS CodePipeline, you can add an approval action to a stage in a pipeline at the point where you want the pipeline execution to stop so that someone with the required AWS Identity and Access Management permissions can approve or reject the action.If the action is approved, the pipeline execution resumes. If the action is rejected-or if no one approves or rejects the action within seven days of the pipeline reaching the action and stopping-the result is the same as an action failing, and the pipeline execution does not continue.You might use manual approvals for these reasons:* You want someone to perform a code review or change management review before a revision is allowed into the next stage of a pipeline.* You want someone to perform manual quality assurance testing on the latest version of an application,* or to confirm the integrity of a build artifact, before it is released.* You want someone to review new or updated text before it is published to a company website.

NEW QUESTION: 2Which option is true regarding the $HOME_NET variable?A. defines the network the active policy protectsB. is used by all rules to define the internal networkC. has a default value of "all"D. is a policy-level variableAnswer: A

NEW QUESTION: 3You implement a Windows Communication Foundation (WCF) service. The service is hosted in Internet Information Services (IIS).The service must use X.509 certificates to authorize specific methods.You need to configure the service.What should you do? (Each correct answer presents part of the solution. Choose two.)A. Set the value of the ControlEvidence property of the SecurityPermissionAttribute to the identity of the certificate.B. In the web.config file for the service, in the serviceAuthorization element, set the value of the PrincipalPermissionMode attribute to UseAspNetRoles.C. In the web.config file for the service, in the serviceAuthorization element, set the value of the PrincipalPermissionMode attribute to UseWindowsGroups.D. Set the value of the Name property of the PrincipalPermissionAttribute to the identity of the certificate.Answer: B,D*Explanation:A: You can use the PrincipalPermissionAttribute class to control access to a method if the client credential type is a certificate. To do this, you must have the certificate's subject and thumbprint.Example:// Only a client authenticated with a valid certificate that has the// specified subject name and thumbprint can call this method.[PrincipalPermission(SecurityAction.Demand,Name = "CN=ReplaceWithSubjectName;123456712345677E8E230FDE624F841B1CE9D41E")]public double Multiply(double a, double b){return a * b; }C: Example:Set the PrincipalPermissionMode property to UseAspNetRoles as shown in the followingconfiguration example:<behaviors><serviceBehaviors><behavior name="SvcBehavior1"><serviceAuthorization principalPermissionMode="UseAspNetRoles" /></behavior></serviceBehaviors></behaviors> Setting this value to UseAspNetRoles indicates that the Name property of the PrincipalPermissionAttribute will be used to perform a string comparison. When a certificate is used as a client credential, by default WCF concatenates the certificate common name and the thumbprint with a semicolon to create a unique value for the client's primary identity. With UseAspNetRoles set as the PrincipalPermissionMode on the service, this primary identity value is compared with the Name property value to determine the access rights of the user.
