B. 포아송
C. 이항
D. 지수
Answer: B
Explanation:Queuing models assume that arrivals follow a Poisson process: the events (arrivals) are independent, any number of events must be possible in the interval of time, the probability {of an event is proportional to the length of the interval, and the probability {of more than one event is negligible if the interval is sufficiently} small. If  $\lambda$  is the average number of events in a given interval,  $k$  is the number of events, and  $e$  is the natural logarithm (2.71828...), the probability of  $k$  is  $f(k) = \frac{\lambda^k e^{-\lambda}}{k!}$ .
A bank has two drive-in lanes to serve customers: one attached to the bank itself and one on an island. One teller serves both stations. The bank is interested in determining the average waiting times of customers and has developed a model based on random numbers. The two key factors are the time between successive car arrivals and the time customers wait in line. Assume that the analysis begins with cars just arriving at both service windows both requiring 3 minutes of service time. Car 1 is the attached window attached to the bank unless that window has more cars waiting than the island window. The lone teller will always serve the car that arrived first. If two cars arrive simultaneously, the one at the attached window will be served before the one at the island.
