NEW QUESTION: 1A. Option EB. Option DC. Option BD. Option CE. Option AAnswer: A,B
Explanation:D: A RADIUS (Remote Authentication Dial-in User Service) server is a server with a database of user accounts and passwords used as a central authentication database for users requiring network access. RADIUS servers are commonly used by ISP's to authenticate their customer's Internet connections. Remote users connect to one or more Remote Access Servers. The remote access servers then forward the authentication requests to the central RADIUS server.E: 802.1X is an IEEE Standard for Port-based Network Access Control (PNAC). It provides an authentication mechanism to devices wishing to attach to a network. 802.1X authentication involves three parties: a supplicant, an authenticator, and an authentication server. The supplicant is a client that wishes to attach to the network. The authenticator is a network device, such as an Ethernet switch, wireless access point or in this case, a remote access server and the authentication server is the RADIUS server.

NEW QUESTION: 4 Which of the following is NOT a proper media control?
A. The media that is reused in a sensitive environment does not need sanitization.
B. A proper storage environment should be provided for the media.
C. The data media should be logged to provide a physical inventory control.
D. All data storage media should be accurately marked.
Answer: A
Explanation: The correct answer is "The media that is reused in a sensitive environment does not need sanitization". Sanitization is the process of removing information from used data media to prevent data remanence. Different media require different types of sanitation. All the others are examples of proper media controls.
